

METAMORPHOSIS: dalla Baronia alla Boston University

Hello

My name is Pasquale Freda, an Italian-American immigrated to the United States in the 1960s, from San Nicola Baronia in the southern Italian province of Avellino, a very poor and forgotten region where job opportunities are scarce and young people's futures remain dark.

In the mid-nineties I started an initiative to help the young people of my native land the Baronia by establishing a four-year endowment for undergraduate studies at the prestigious Boston University. For more information, please visit: <http://www.pasqualefreda.com/Eindex.html>

This four year program and the young age of the students has proved to create a true Metamorphosis in the life of the student who, after graduation finds him/ herself launched into a global job market.

For a young student who has just finished high school the opportunity to live for four years with young people from every corner of the globe, to be exposed to new cultures, to learn a language as important as English opens new horizons.

All this combined with a four year degree from the prestigious Boston University provides the tools to secure a high level job in any corner of the globe. An irreversible transformation for the young man/woman who can find work in every corner of the world and for the community who can benefit from his professional contribution.

Boston University is ranked 11th in the world for post graduate job finding opportunities: Business Insider Italy - <http://tinyurl.com/mmex9o4>

This four year scholarship has already proved a concrete success as reflected in the stories of previous students who have benefited from the scholarship in the past.

Nicola Ricci is an example: Corriere della Sera <http://tinyurl.com/mm48lg2>

Antonella Tanga, a young lady from the high school of Vallata is currently studying Engineering at Boston University with the "Pasquale Freda Boston University Scholarship". Others will follow this path.

I have established an ENDOWMENT at Boston University for this project titled: Metamorphosis: dalla Baronia alla Boston University.
